Molly is a licensed marriage and family therapist in private practice. She received her master’s degree in marriage and family therapy from Bethel Seminary San Diego and returned to Bethel as an adjunct professor in the MFT program. Her clinical focus is working with individual adults with a history of trauma. Molly has completed all three levels of IFS training, is certified in IFS, and has helped staff IFS Institute trainings. She participated in a monthly consultation group with Richard Schwartz, founder and developer of IFS, for three years and attended three weeklong retreats for intensive IFS training. She presented twice at the IFS annual conference on the integration of Christianity and IFS and was acknowledged in Dr. Schwartz’s most recent book No Bad Parts as someone who influenced his understanding of the integration of the model with Christianity.
